The model was highly certain, and missed the truth

Calibrated SST predictions at ten test points across a turbulent channel, compared with direct simulation (the truth). Recalibration widens the 90% range; it does not move the predictions or change their probability distributions.

Coverage shown is observed on these ten test points. The conformal 90% guarantee is marginal and assumes exchangeable points; points along one channel are correlated, so this sample cannot confirm it.